Mitterrand Regime Faces Issue of Communist Role

By Jonathan Kandell International Herald Tribune PARIS — Following the Socialist landslide in Sunday's legislative elections in France, the possibility of Communist participation in the cabinet has become the key issue facing President Francois Mitterrand.

support for Mr. Mitterrand's domestic and foreign programs. groups and to strengthen the decision-making power of local regions and communities. The real test of any accord between the two parties will be the Communist leadership's attitude in foreign affairs. The Socialists have publicly insisted that the Communists will have to accept the government's strong support for NATO, its denunciation of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and its opposition to the buildup of Soviet SS-20 missiles aimed at Western Europe.

that they would be willing to muffle their voices on controversial foreign issues and reach an agreement with the Socialists that stops short of an open repudiation of the previous Communist positions. Communist participation in a Socialist government would be a calculated risk for both parties.

Benevolent Socialists

But the coalition was clearly of greater benefit to the Socialists, who grew from an insignificant political group to the major voice of the left. When the Communist decided to return to a hard-line isolation and rupture their ties with the Socialists in 1978, the left lost a chance to gain power through National Assembly elections.

Socialist Party sympathizers in Paris waved red roses and gave the victory sign Sunday after the French legislative elections.

Bani-Sadr Dismissed; 3-Man Council Rules

By Barry May Reuters TEHRAN — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini fired President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr on Monday, neutralizing the last power center independent of Iran's ruling fundamentalist Moslem clergy.

U.S. Vietnam Policy Worries New Zealand

Suspect in Atlanta Charged in Death of 28th Black Victim

By Wendell Rawls Jr.
New York Times Service

ATLANTA — Wayne B. Williams, a 23-year-old music promoter and talent scout, has been arrested and charged in the most recent of 28 murders of black children and young adults in Atlanta. He was held in jail without bond to await a preliminary hearing early this week.

Atlanta's public safety commissioner, Lee P. Brown, refused to be drawn into speculation about whether evidence being developed in the case could connect the defendant to any of the other 27 murders that have bewildered this city since July, 1979. "We will continue to investigate the other cases," he said, "and we will not rule out this man or anyone else as a suspect."

The authorities say they do not believe that any one person is responsible for all 28 killings, but they suspect that one person is responsible for a string of killings whose victims have been asphyxiated and thrown in the Chattahoochee River.

Mr. Williams, who is black, was charged in the murder of Nathaniel Cater, 27. Mr. Williams was taken into custody without incident at about 5 p.m. Sunday at his home west of central Atlanta. According to Mr. Brown, the young man's attorney had been alerted by police that he would be arrested and was present at the time.

The lawyer, Mary Welton, said, "Now at least he has a chance of responding in an appropriate manner to what he's been accused of."

Mr. Williams was held for 12 hours at FBI headquarters on June 4. Lewis Slaton, the Fulton County district attorney, had insisted that there was insufficient evidence to charge anyone in any of the murders. But he was included in meetings on Friday, Saturday and Sunday where the top officials in the murder investigations discussed increasing physical evidence.

"He decided today that we had sufficient evidence to make an arrest and we did," said Mr. Brown on Sunday.

Another high-ranking law enforcement official said that "there is no question that the investigators are looking at Mr. Williams in terms of a string of deaths," but that "they are taking the safest route of arresting him in the one murder where they feel they have strong evidence while they continue working on the other murders."

Although the FBI would make no comment about the arrest or any other aspect of the case on Sunday, a high-ranking local law enforcement source said that the bureau had been seeking a witness in the Cater case, leading to speculation that Sunday's arrest indicated that the witness had been located.

Sufficient Evidence

Mr. Brown would say only that the arrest was based on sufficient evidence and would make a distinction between physical evidence and possible testimony from a witness. A source on the special task force investigating the murders said that the developing evidence was all physical.

For the last two and a half weeks, Mr. Williams has been the center of news media attention in Atlanta, with reporters and television crews sitting in vigil with police officers at his home.

Mr. Williams was first interrogated on May 22, two days before Mr. Cater's body was found. The early-morning questioning took place after officers on stakeout at the southwest edge of Atlanta heard a loud splash in the Chattahoochee River.

The officers reported that they followed Mr. Williams's car as it came off the bridge, then stopped him and questioned him on the highway for about two hours. He was questioned again on May 23 and was placed under constant surveillance. On June 3 he was brought in for 12 hours of questioning, this time at the FBI headquarters.

On Sunday, Mr. Williams's attorneys were still waiting for a federal judge to rule on a motion to keep newspapers and broadcasters from using his name. In addition, the lawyers had moved to restrain the authorities from discussing his status with the media. The morning after his stay at FBI headquarters, Mr. Williams held a news conference at his home to proclaim his innocence.

Dole, Rostenkowski Exchange Charges On Status of U.S. Tax Reduction Bills

By Edward Cowan
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Sen. Robert J. Dole of Kansas, the Republican chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, has asserted that House Democrats may not want a tax cut in 1981.

However, the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, a Democrat from Illinois, rejected that accusation Sunday, asserting that he has made "a campaign commitment that we would have a tax cut this year."

In turn, Rep. Rostenkowski charged that President Reagan had agreed to additional tax relief for crude oil royalty owners and to larger estate tax exemptions to win the votes of conservative Democrats from Texas and other Southern states. The president must pick up at least 30 Democratic votes on the House floor to defeat the Democratic bill expected from Ways and Means and then to substitute an administration bill for the rejected Democratic measure.

The charges and countercharges by Sen. Dole and Rep. Rostenkowski occurred in weekend interviews and contributed to the emerging picture of the 1981 tax debate as a curtain-raiser for the 1982 congressional election campaign.

Sen. Dole was interviewed on ABC-TV's "Issues and Answers" program. Rep. Rostenkowski was interviewed by the Cable News

Network and also by The New York Times.

The exchanges came at the end of the first week of drafting of a tax bill in the Finance Committee and in the Ways and Means Committee. Sen. Dole said last week he expected his panel to report a bill by Thursday. Rep. Rostenkowski said his timetable called for Ways and Means to deal with the most politically charged part of the bill, tax relief for individuals, in the week of July 6.

[A suggestion by some Democrats that Congress might not complete action on a tax-cut bill until the end of September, instead of Aug. 1 as Mr. Reagan wants, prompted Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan to say the president might demand that Congress stay in session this summer until it completes action on the legislation, The Associated Press reported in Washington.]

The essential difference between the Republican Reagan administration and the House Democratic leadership was the question of three years of cuts or two. Mr. Reagan would cut individual tax rates by 5 percent on Oct. 1, 1981, and by 10 percent on July 1, 1982, and by 10 percent again on July 1, 1983. Rep. Rostenkowski reaffirmed that he opposed including the third round of rate cuts in a 1981 tax bill.

The Reagan administration said it was sticking to its proposal to shorten present depreciation periods to three years for vehicles and some other types of equipment,

Officials Check Files of Iranians in U.S. To See If Papers Were Gotten by Fraud

By Robert Pear
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials are reviewing immigration records for hundreds of Iranian aliens on the suspicion that many received immigration benefits, including status as permanent residents of the United States, through fraud or bribery.

The investigation focuses on the period after the seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, which led President Jimmy Carter to impose severe restrictions on the issuance of visas and permanent resident alien identification cards, commonly known as green cards, to Iranians.

Officials of the Immigration and Naturalization Service and the Federal Bureau of Investigation said last week that federal agents were reviewing the records and interviewing Iranians to determine how hundreds had obtained visas and green cards despite the restrictions.

Although the United States and Iran have no formal diplomatic relations, Iranians streaming out of the Middle East, through Europe, continue to seek a haven in the United States. They include supporters of the late shah, opponents of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and members of many religious and ethnic minority groups.

Focus on Tactics

The officials said that a grand jury, to be convened here this summer, would focus on two tactics tried by many Iranians: the use of counterfeit documents to show a close family relationship to citizens or permanent residents of the United States, and the incorporation of American businesses purporting to be subsidiaries of Iranian companies.

Both tactics enabled Iranians to get green cards, which gives foreigners most of the rights of citizens. After living in this country for five years, permanent resident aliens are eligible to become naturalized citizens.

In the last year, he said, he offered his services as an immigration consultant from the Falls Church Office of the Sunshine Co. of America, Inc. The company's articles of incorporation, on file with the Virginia State Corporation Commission, show that it was formed in December, 1979, as a subsidiary of an Iranian company to engage in the export-import business.

It became virtually impossible for such companies to trade with Iran after President Carter, on April 7, 1980, announced a break in diplomatic relations with Tehran and prohibited exports from the United States to Iran.

Several immigration lawyers said that their Iranian clients had been interviewed by immigration officers who wanted to know about Mr. Javid and his activities.

With the help of a grand jury, federal agents also plan to investigate whether Immigration Service employees collaborated with Iranians in their efforts to get benefits for themselves and their relatives.

Sources close to the investigation said the investigators believed that some Iranians had paid Immigration Service employees indirectly, through intermediaries, who laundered the money.

The investigation to date has concentrated on the Washington district office of the Immigration Service, which serves the District of Columbia and Virginia, but it may be extended to other offices.

Moroccan Socialists Say 100 Demonstrators Killed

From Agency Dispatches

CASABLANCA, Morocco — The opposition Socialist Party said on Monday that more than 100 persons were killed in two days of demonstrations during a general strike in Casablanca over the weekend.

A leader of the Union Socialiste des Forces Populaires (USFP) said that many demonstrators who were wounded when security forces fired on them had died in police stations.

The Moroccan government announced in Rabat on Monday night that 66 persons died and 110 were injured in the two days of violence in Casablanca. An Interior Ministry statement said 73 of the injured were members of the security forces and 37 were demonstrators.

It added that the deaths were from injuries inflicted by knives, blunt instruments and shanks. Earlier, the Moroccan government said that known criminals and fugitives were under arrest for instigating the weekend disturbances.

A communique was issued in Rabat by the office of Premier Maati Bouabid saying that the persons detained in the incidents were charged with such crimes as "looting, devastation, obstruction to freedom of movement causing death, arson... and violence against security forces."

General Strike

The Socialists and their trade union organization called a general strike to protest against increases in food prices last month. Moroccan opposition politicians in Paris said Monday that at least 35 persons were killed and up to 5,000 others injured in the weekend rioting. The opposition figures said that many of the injured also were taken into custody during the street battles in Casablanca.

Ait Kaddour of the opposition Union of Moroccan Socialist Forces denied the contention of Moroccan Premier Maati Bouabid that the disturbances were inspired by "a foreign hand."

Opposition Group

In Madrid, Mustapha Aziz, head of the clandestine Moroccan opposition group Union of Moroccan Democrats (UDM), said Monday that 131 persons were killed in the food riots in Casablanca on Saturday.

Mr. Aziz, in a news conference, said that 720 persons were in a military hospital in Casablanca, suffering from serious wounds. He said the Democratic Workers Confederation (CDT), the nation's second largest labor union, had called for the demonstration and a daylong general strike Saturday to protest the rise in government-controlled food staples.

Mr. Kaddour said that 26 persons who were wounded had died in a police station where they were being held in the Roches Noires quarter, an industrial suburb north of Casablanca.

A physician employed in a Casablanca hospital said that at least 10 persons with gunshot wounds died in the hospital over the weekend. There were also demonstrations in the Moroccan capital, Rabat, on Sunday but no violence was reported.

Australia Is Said To Waste Funds for Aborigines

United Press International

SYDNEY — Millions of dollars marked for aboriginal health care have been wasted by an inefficient bureaucracy, according to a confidential report kept under wraps for a year by the Australian government.

Parts of the report were leaked to the press as criticism mounted against the federal government's failure to hand over to the states responsibility for providing health care to the 180,000 aborigines in the nation of 14.5 million people.

The health plan is part of Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser's pro-aboriginal package to cut some of the out of government and hand over federal functions to the states.

But opponents say the government's aboriginal health plan will be an already inefficient service in a complete disaster.

According to the leaked report, Mr. Fraser received a year ago a report that aboriginal health is worsening in several key areas, including venereal disease, dental health, mental illness, diabetes and alcohol abuse. The annual federal expenditure on state programs is only "not effective."

Inmate Joins Maze Strike; IRA Escapee Defies Police

United Press International

BELFAST — An inmate at the Maze prison near here Monday joined six other convicts in the IRA-led hunger strike to press demands for political prisoner status.

Britain's Northern Ireland Office identified the new faster as Michael Devine, an Irish National Liberation Army member, of Londonderry. He is serving a 12-year sentence for terrorist offenses.

The announcement came a day after convicted Irish Republican Army member Michael A. McKee, one of eight men who shot their way out of an Ulster jail, defied hundreds of police to appear before a gathering of Irish nationalists in the Irish Republic.

Striker Deteriorates

Four inmates have already died in the Maze hunger strike, and the IRA has vowed to add a new striker each Monday until its demands are met for upgraded status as political prisoners.

The condition of Joe McDonnell, who joined the fast 45 days ago, is deteriorating, the Northern Ireland Office said. IRA spokesmen said Mr. McDonnell's eyesight was worsening and that he could die early next month.

Outside Dublin Sunday, the annual graveside ceremony honoring Irish patriot Wolfe Tone was marked by the surprise appearance of Mr. McKee, who escaped from the Crumlin Road prison in Belfast June 10 with seven other IRA prisoners.

"I'm glad to be free," Mr. McKee said.

Risking arrest for membership in the IRA, which is illegal both in Ireland and Northern Ireland, Mr. McKee had slipped past hundreds of police around the cemetery and then disappeared into the crowd.

Irish police refused to comment on their failure to arrest Mr. McKee.

Mr. McKee, a member of the so-called M-60 gang, was awaiting trial in Belfast when he and seven fellow inmates overpowered prison guards, stole their uniforms and dashed through the prison gates amid gunfire. None of the escapees has been recaptured.

It follows a Northern Ireland by-election earlier this year in which Bobby Sands, an IRA member on hunger strike in the Maze prison, was elected to Parliament. He later died.

SWAPO Leader Says U.S. Thwarting Namibia Efforts

By Pranay B. Gupta
New York Times Service

NAIROBI — The president of the South-West Africa People's Organization accused the Reagan administration Monday of undermining efforts by the United Nations to bring about a settlement in South-West Africa (Namibia).

In a harsh criticism of recent U.S. diplomatic efforts, reflecting a rising sentiment among African leaders gathered in Nairobi for a summit meeting of the Organization of African Unity, SWAPO leader Sam Nujoma said that it appeared to his guerrilla organization that President Reagan had decided to throw the weight of the United States squarely behind the white minority regime of South Africa.

Namibia is administered by South Africa under a mandate given after World War I by the now-defunct League of Nations.

"We denounce the recent American diplomatic missions to Namibia because this is tantamount to recognizing the puppet regime created by South Africa there," Mr. Nujoma said at a news conference. He was referring to a visit to Namibia recently by Deputy Secretary of State William P. Clark, who also traveled to South Africa and Zimbabwe.

Mr. Nujoma urged new, "comprehensive" sanctions by the West against South Africa. "This is the only way — there is no other way out," he said.

The Reagan administration is coming under increasing criticism from African leaders at the OAU meeting. The summit session, which formally begins Tuesday, was preceded by a meeting of the OAU Council of Ministers.

Foreign ministers from the 50 member states of the OAU have supported the idea of asking the West, especially the United States, to institute new sanctions against Pretoria. Mr. Nujoma said that if the West, in particular the United States, failed to heed this call, his organization would ask the OAU to call for economic sanctions against major Western powers.

In response to a question, he said that one possibility would be to ask Nigeria, the largest supplier of crude oil to the United States after Saudi Arabia, to stop its U.S. oil shipments.

Mr. Nujoma's wrath seemed especially focused on U.S. efforts to promote the possibility of a constitutional conference in Namibia before elections to be held under UN supervision.

He said that SWAPO, along with the OAU, held that the "only basis" for a fair settlement in Namibia was Security Council Resolution 435, passed in 1978, which calls for elections under UN supervision first.

The provisions of this resolution, Mr. Nujoma said, simply guarantee the rights of Namibia's white minority, while a constitutional conference before the elections would result in the white minority now in power instituting future benefits for itself far in excess of what its size might warrant.

Mr. Nujoma also said at the news conference that mercenaries from Portugal, Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, Canada and the United States were fighting alongside South African forces in Namibia and parts of Angola where SWAPO was engaging in a low-level guerrilla war with the South Africans.

In a related development Monday, Randall Robinson, head of the Washington-based organization TransAfrica, a lobby group for African-American interests, disclosed to the OAU leaders details of a reported U.S. proposal for a constitution for Namibia.

Mr. Robinson's organization obtained the secret proposal through its sources in Washington, he said, expressing chagrin at what he termed the Reagan administration's moves to "legitimize" the South African regime at the expense of the interests of black Africans.

According to the broad details disclosed by Mr. Robinson, who was invited to address the OAU leaders, the Reagan administration is proposing a constitution that calls for the establishment of a federal system with state boundaries that would be coextensive with territories of Namibian ethnic groups.

This system would be more or less along the lines of the tribal homelands that South Africa has set up within its boundaries, Mr. Robinson said.

The State Department documents that Mr. Robinson released indicated that, in the "Western contact group" on Namibia — the United States, Canada, West Germany, France and Britain — at least one member, Canada, appeared to feel that the Reagan

Huge Potential Seen for Hydroelectricity

By Joanne Omang
Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON — Small hydroelectric projects with generators the size of a suitcase can produce enough electricity to transform many isolated communities around the world, according to a study.

The study, by the Worldwatch Institute, a nonprofit research organization, notes that hydropower now provides a quarter of the world's energy, and it said that figure could nearly be quadrupled, eliminating the need for new coal or nuclear plants except in desert areas.

"Hydropower is a clean, renewable and inflation-proof energy source," said Daniel Duedney, the study's author, at a news conference. Norway, Ghana and Zambia already get 99 percent of their electricity from hydropower, and 32 other nations use it for more than two-thirds of their power, nearly all of it from large dams.

Because most rivers are publicly owned, decisions on dam-building are generally in government hands, the study said, asserting that they have often bungled the responsibility.

Big dams can cause big environmental problems — siltation, erosion, waterborne disease and wildlife disruption — and if the problems are not anticipated, "disaster — human and natural — is sure to result," Mr. Duedney wrote.

The study, "Rivers of Power," noted that only 12 percent of Third World residents have electricity.

He said that, though Zimbabwe "is not in a position to participate in any sanctions," his country "will not stand in the way of their imposition even if they hurt us."

Sadat Accuses Opposition in Religious Riots

CAIRO — President Anwar Sadat on Monday accused Egyptian opposition parties of stirring up Muslim-Christian riots last week in which authorities said 10 persons were killed and 55 injured.

The worst sectarian violence here in years started with a gunfight between a Christian and a Muslim family. An official statement issued Sunday said 113 persons had been detained after the clashes between Muslims and Christian Copts near Cairo.

Mr. Sadat told the weekly newspaper Mayo, published by his ruling National Democratic Party, that "those who claim to represent the opposition in the country were behind the latest troubles to show that Egypt lacks security."

"The Communists and others, including members of the Socialist Labor Party have formed one block," he said.

POWER AND CULTURE
The Japanese-American War, 1941-1945
By Akira Iriye. 304 pp. $22.
Harvard University Press, Cambridge, Mass. 02138.
Reviewed by John Toland

PERHAPS the greatest irony of World War II is that the enemy the United States most detested, Japan, has become not only its ally but its closest friend in the Orient. The same Americans who still find it distasteful to visit Germany usually find themselves at ease in Japan. Even before the attack on Pearl Harbor most Americans regarded the Japanese as subhuman. Japan was the Yellow Peril rather than China, and equally as evil as Nazi Germany. Moreover, the Japanese seemed like creatures from another world, altogether an incomprehensible contradiction: polite and barbarous, honest and treacherous, brave and cowardly, industrious and lazy — all at the same time. To the Japanese these were not anomalies at all but one united whole, and they couldn't understand why Westerners didn't comprehend this. To the Japanese the more numerous the contradictions in a man, the deeper he was.

Even informed Americans understood little or nothing of this Buddhist-culted young radicals who helped plunge Japan into adventures in Manchuria and China. They assumed that these aggressions were merely steps plotted by the Japanese military leaders who, like Hitler, sought to seize the world themselves. What Westerners failed to realize was that underneath the veneer of modernity and Westernization, Japan was still Orientalist and that its emergence from feudalism to imperialism had come so precipitously that its leaders, who were interested solely in Western methods rather than Western values, had neither the time nor the inclination to develop liberalism and humanitarianism.

The Japanese shared many similarities with Americans, striking parallels which have been relatively unexplored in postwar studies. It is fortunate that Akira Iriye has finally brought forward a thoughtful and independent assessment of the Japanese-American conflict from the perspectives of both combatants. He has viewed them as two powers and cultures, concluding that "international relations are interpower and intercultural relations." He elaborates this concept by examining the meanings the two adversaries gave to the war. Both fought fiercely to survive, yet both "were concerned with more than physical survival and were keenly interested in defining what they were struggling to preserve." Iriye's conclusion is that the war aims and peace objectives of both nations were not at all disparate.

Iriye is well qualified on two counts: He lived in Japan during the conflict, and he is now professor of American history at the University of Chicago. He asserts that the war for both nations was a search for international stability, not a struggle for power; and that throughout the hostilities influential Japanese such as Marquis Kido (lord keeper of the privy seal and the emperor's closest adviser), former prime minister Konoye, and Hirohito himself shared with the Roosevelt administration a Wilsonian dream of international cooperation; and that in the latter stage of the war, Japanese leaders, including Tojo, were actively planning a cooperative world structure very much like that being considered in Washington.

To an extent the very act of fighting was obliterating differences between the two nations, and by the end of 1943 there was a marked similarity between the two nations. This is an excellent, meaty book blessed with original research. Iriye has delved resourcefully into official Japanese archives as well as recent, declassified U.S. documents, and the result is a refreshingly welcome reappraisal of the wartime relationship between Japan and the United States. "Power and Culture" is an important step toward a deeper understanding between two nations upon which depends the stability of Asia, perhaps, the continent of the 21st century.

John Toland, who won the Pulitzer Prize for "The Rising Sun: The Decline and Fall of the Japanese Empire, 1931-1945," wrote this review for The Washington Post.

BRIDGE By Alan Truscott

MOST experts would no doubt solve the problem presented by the diagrammed deal. Perhaps one should say all the experts, for a declarer who could not solve the clear-cut playing problem involved would deserve demotion to intermediate status. South overcalled one no-trump with two spades and was rather surprised to be raised to game. North knew that his kings might be badly placed, but had confidence, justified as it turned out, in his partner's skill. The knowledge that one defender has virtually all the missing high-card strength is usually an advantage to the declarer.

Graham Surpasses Burns to Seize U.S. Open

By John Feinstein
Washington Post Service
RDMORE, Pa. — David Graham was walking down the fairway of the Merion Golf Club, the cheers all around him, when he had a two-lead and he knew he had won the U.S. Open.

That was the only fairway he missed and he hit all 18 greens in regulation.

Bill Rogers, whose 69 Sunday earned him a second-place tie with Burns at 276, could only shake his head in wonder at Graham's round. "No way did George Burns lose this tournament," he said.

At this point, briefly, Rogers had become a factor. He had slammed a wedge to within five feet at the 12th to make birdie and was four under. "Right then, I thought I had a chance to win," he said.

It was not a vintage performance by Borg, who took an hour and 35 minutes to finish the first round in his quest to equal Willie Renshaw's mark of six consecutive Wimbledon titles, set nearly 100 years ago.

Little Else to Do
There was little else Burns could do this day. Graham seized this moment on Sunday and never let go.

No Other Challengers
No one else challenged on this humid, breezy afternoon. John Cook and John Schroeder, who tied for fourth at 279, never got close.

Good Illustration
Perhaps the second hole illustrates the day better than any other. After starting with a 20-foot putt on one, Graham split the middle with his tee shot.

Nervous Seconds
Sixteen was the final nail for Burns. He missed the green again and his eight-foot par putt slid off again.

McEnroe Penalized
With the first set under his belt, the Swede started to produce some of his characteristic rapier passing shots down both wings.

Borg Wins Wimbledon Opener; Lendl, Noah, Pecci Eliminated

WIMBLEDON, England — Bjorn Borg double-faulted himself into early trouble but soon recovered his touch as he opened the defense of his Wimbledon tennis crown Monday with a 7-6, 6-3, 6-1 victory over Peter Renner.

McEnroe twice was penalized points, once in an argument with umpire Edward James, and again for insulting the referee, Fred Hoyle, who had been called from the tournament office when McEnroe sat in a chair and refused to play.

Wimbledon, England (AP) — Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, seeded No. 2 in the women's singles, has withdrawn from both Wimbledon doubles events.

"Come again, lady." "My kitchen appliance man is missing. He was here one day working on my dishwasher, and said he was going back to the shop for a part, and I haven't seen him since."

"Do you have a name we can work on?" "I never got his name. I found his company in the Yellow Pages, under '24 Hour Service—Satisfaction Guaranteed.'"

"I think you have to face reality. We haven't had too much luck in locating missing repairmen. Once they decide to leave an unfinished job they're rarely heard from again."

"But suppose he was in an accident?" "I don't know. I'm not a doctor. I'm just a repairman. I can't fix anything but a dishwasher."
